Hanson is charged with setting on fire the postoffice at Fillmore September 16, 1988, after he had robbed it. Early on Friday morning the prosecution ended its case. After Judge Marioneaux had made a statement of what the defense expected to prove, Hanson was the first witness called. His testimony was simply a general denial of the material facts adduced by the prosecution. He denied the story told by Warner and Trimble Thursday that he was uptown the night of the fire, disguised. He was up town, he admitted but was desseed in his ordinary at tire. When asked by the district attorney how he accounted for the letters stolen being found in his room his reply was. "I haven't the least idea, Mr. Booth." He samitted that he passed Trimble and his girl the night of the fire at the solicitation of Warner, but before he did so he turned up the collar of his cost and pulled his hat down over his eyes. When asked why he, did so he said, "for amusement."

John Hanson, a brother of the defendant, said the night of the fire he passed the postoffice about 12 o clock. he heard volces under the shed and recognized the voice of one as Dick Duncan. The men were drinking there and one was smoking. This was about thirty minutes before the outbreak of fire.

Postmaster Recalled.

When the morning session opened John C. Kelly, the present postmaster at Fillmore, was recalled and testified as to what government goods were in his possession at the time of the fire. Questioned by Judge Marioneaux witness admitted that the letter box at the post-office might be full and a newspaper could be put through the aperture and he did not think any one would get their hands through.

Cross-examined by Judge Marioneaux, witness said she did remember seeing either Warner or Trimble at the fire.

Rufus' Day and Hans C. Hanson, cashier and assistant cashier of the State Bank of Millard county, were shown the letters found in Hanson's room, but they could not possibly Identify them as the letters malled on the Sunday evening of the fire by Rufus Day.

District Attorney Booth offered in evidence the letter written by Hazel Beauregard to her brother in Salt Lake City.

Ruling by Judge Marshall.

Judge Marioneaux objected to the introduction of the letter on various grounds, one being that it had never been shown that they had ever been in Hanson's possession. He also made a motion to strike out the evidence of Roley and Flaver, given Thursday, is to finding the letters in Hanson's room. Judge Marshall overruled the objection and denied the motion. Hanson on the Stand.

Judge Marioneaux then made a brief statement, setting forth what the defense expected to prove. At its conclusion, the judged cailed Frank Hanson, the defendent to the stand. The greater part of the time that Hanson was giving his testimony he rocked nervously backward and forward in his chair. Hanson said that on the afternoon of the day of the fire he attended the races at the track. As he started home it began to rain. He had on a straw hat and light sommer suit. When he got home he changed his coat and vest donning a black coat and vest and black Stetson hat. He did not own a derby hat. After spending considerable time with Mr. Rae, he went into the drug store and left there about 19:30 o clock. He saw the Warner boy as he left the drug store, and as he started along the block Warner followed him and said. "Are you going down this way?" and the witness said he was going down to see his hrother. Johnny. Warner said "this would be a good night to go out and eavesdrop on some of these people and see something funny." Hanson said that didn't interest him.

So far as the testimony given by Warner is concerned, the defendant denied it almost in its entirety. However, at the corner of the block he consented to go over with Warner to where Trimble and his girl were standing, 'But,'' said he, 'hefere I go I will put up my coat collar, pull my hat down, go up the street and come back.' the forenoon recess was announced by Judge Marshall.

The defendant resumed the witness stand upon court reconvening. He told of several visits to Sait Lake, said he remembered when the indictment was returned, but 'I was not arrested,' sabilite. He said he saw Postmaster Kelly about noon the day of the fire, and it was about half-past six when he returned from the races. He had no conversation with the postmaster. He was in the postoffice and went there with Sheriff Black, Frank Day and Peter Beauregard to show them the lock on the rear door which was Jamaged by a burglar. This incident arose through a conversation they were having, Day saying that he was arrested for it because he had a quarter in his possession, but he was subsequently released and the whole thing was hushed up.

Judge Marioneaux—Did you set fire to the postoffice that night?

Harrison—No, sir.

Witness said he never had in his possession, or ever saw, the letters taken from his room until shown them by his counsel in the courtroom. He never took any letters from the postoffice on that Sunday or prior to that time, said he, and he never placed any letters on top of the cupboard in his room—never knew there were any letters on top of the cupboard in his room—never knew there were any letters on top of the cupboard. He never took any stamps or any government or any property whatever. Witness told of having a discussion with Warner, and the latter drew a knife.

This concluded the direct examination of the witness.

Questioned About Letters.

Hanson deuted that he told Charley Laver that when he went home that Sunday night he went through the park. No one was living at his father's house at that time but his father and himself. No one lived at his home during the time he was in Salt Lake.

Hanson's brothers and sisters attended to his father while he was away.

District Attorney Booth—How do you account for those letters being there?

Witness—I haven't the least idea.

District Attorney Booth—How do you suppose those letters could have got on the top of that library of yours, in that corner and be there for a long time without your knowing it?

Witness—I don't know they were there a long time.

SPECULATION.

The present time is favora the present time is favora-ble for urging the henefits of life insurance. The business world frequently experiences the uncertainty of speculative investments.
While at may be proper and in many cases necessary to invest money in a way that will not be certain of returns, yet before one can afford to take before one can afford to take chances in any business venture, whether speculative or otherwise, he must, if he is to be classed as a far-seeing business man, provide against possible contingencies by protecting his family, his creditors and his business associates.

Life insurance does not promise his returns if one lives, but ise big returns if one lives, but comparatively small deposits invoke "Security" in case one is called hence in the midst of a business career. If he lives his deposits will come back to him.

If a man is honest with his family, his creditors and his business associates, he will increase his insurance as the speculative horizon becomes more cloudy. Some people do not realize the need of good, old-fashioned life insurance. The man who is looking for investments is not necessarily the man who needs to carry the man who needs to carry this question on his mind, but it is the man who has already invested who needs insurance to round out his position in the business world. It will be interesting to know that Oliver Morosco, the proprietor of the Burbank theater. Los Augeles, and the partner of Mr. Belasco and George Baker, in this million dollar stock merger, is a Salt Lake boy, and his success is recognized in all branches of theatricals.
Together, he and Mr. Belasco witnessed the New York performances of "St. Elmo" and decided upon paying the topmost prices for its use for their chain of theaters in the west, and, in addition, Mr. Belasco contracted to give $10,000 for the road rights for a season of twenty weeks. Since that date he has paid out almost $2000, suppressing pirate and unscrupulous persons from trading on the name.

No one in the west has seen the true play of "St. Elmo," as it has been impossible to secure a copy of the version purchased by Mr. Belasco, and which made the New York success, but various concections have been folsted off on the public under the alluring title of "St. Elmo," and those versions never did, and never will, see the light of a New York production, and in most cases are a burlesque upon one of the most delightful stories ever witnessed upon the stage.
